

The Everlasting Arms

[...]the greatest comforts in life. Because we have become so materialistic, we have lost that grand triumphant conviction that there is no death. Why? and Mr. Bennett rose to his feet excitedly there is not one of those splendid lads who has fallen in battle, who is dead. God still cares for them all, and not one is outside His protection. I can't explain it, but I know. You know? Yes, I know. And I'll tell you why I know. My son Jack was killed at Mons, but he's near me even now. Say it's unreal if you like, say it's unnatural if you will, but it's one of the great glories of life to me.[...].
