

The K-9 Chronicles: Book Two: The Journey ... the Pack Heroics Continue

We saw a shiny piece of metal leaning against some rubble as we passed by what used to be the front of the building. Maggie and I stopped to look at our reflections. We both weren't dark anymore-my head had streaks all over it. I was sure it was the blood I had tasted in my mouth from before. We both had cuts on our paws and legs. I kept looking into that shiny piece of metal to see if maybe Kate was in it too. I felt a sudden sickness pass into my body-it was choking me. I dropped my Kong, gagged, and threw up. Maggie licked the side of my head and then sat down next to me and pressed her chin hard onto the middle of my back...
