

The Mirror of Ravenwood

The Mirror of Ravenwood is an intriguing story of self-discovery, healing, and liberation. It is a dramatic psychological novel with elements of suspense, romance, inspiration, and fantasy. It is a journey from darkness into Light. Although set within the framework of historical England and America, the issues dealt with in The Mirror of Ravenwood are relevant to today—primarily the issues of acceptance, both by society and ones self; the valuing of self; and the importance of forgiveness in the healing process. The Mirror of Ravenwood shows how two people overcome their personal demons and fears to emerge victorious. The Mirror of Ravenwood was written for those who have been scarred by a painful past and seek to be healed. It was written for the lonely heart and despairing mind who seek a better way. It was written for those who have been afraid, who now find the courage to look into the Mirror. Note: This book also contains a special message for the Native American people.
