

Gender-swapped Gothic Classics: Carmilla (Translated)

All characters gender-swapped to provide a unique gendered perspective on classic gothic literature. Minor additions and embellishments sensitively added to help the gender-swapped version of the story read more clearly, whilst respecting the original work. Introduction by Eve Sinning. The gothic classic Carmilla is here presented in a unique new format, with every character gender-swapped. The original text of Sheridan Le Fanu's gothic novella of lesbian vampirism is reproduced in its entirety; with some very minor embellishments and details added to help the gender-swapped version of the story read more clearly. In this alternative new version of this chilling classic story, the primary relationship between vampire and victim is given a masculine homoerotic twist. By swapping the genders, the story is transformed into a wonderfully surprising and entertaining new version of itself. Gender-swapped classics can be read in a new light and from interesting new perspectives, raising fascinating questions about how we perceive and portray gender. What does this action look like when a woman performs it? How does this motivation read when it is experienced by a man? How does changing the genders impact the way we interpret relationships and interactions between characters? And finally, how does changing the gender of the characters change the deeper themes, meanings and morals of the story? These surprising, subversive and chilling stories form part of the Gender-Swapped Gothic Classics series, in which the genders of characters in well-known gothic literature are switched with minimum rewriting to preserve the beautiful original texts.
