

The News in Brief: Tales of the Weird and One of a Hero

This volume of poetry is a mixture of freeverse, cut-ups in the William Burroughs style using language excerpted directly from newspaper and magazine headlines around the world, cinquains and haikus. What remains of the original text used for some cut-ups has been reproduced for readers to see the process. Much of the subject matter examines how news content is often portrayed, the marketing of dubious claims, and where some readers find themselves in the digital age socially, politically, economically and spiritually. Presented as clippings pasted into a scrapbook, these poems cover a range of stories from the Oklahoma City bombing, to wanderlust in Ireland, an homage to Allen Ginsberg and an ironic piece about patriotism dedicated to Frederick Douglass.

Although many of these poems were written in the mid 1990s and subsequently published individually in numerous small press zines, this is the first time they have been collected into a single volume. Surprisingly, they are still cogent two decades later.
