

The New School of Urdu Literature (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from The New School of Urdu Literature Realising the difficulty of assigning each one of the five literary luminaries of India his respective place in order of merit, I have arranged the sketches in order in which they were originally printed or written and wish clearly to state that the arrangement is independent of any significance as to relative merit. Moreover, so different is the sphere occupied by each one of the five eminent writers, so individual and characteristic is the style of each writing, that it would have been impossible to decide who is best, even if I had the indiscretion to try to pronounce on the matter.
