

The Harmonious Life (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from The Harmonious Life Thoughts, thought! Is not the whole world, the universe, the thought of the Divine, the Infinite, reflected in the human soul? And yet how different the reflection in each single mind! For are we not as so many panes of glass through which, if kept clean, the light of the spirit may shine in numberless combinations of iridescent colour? As in a kaleidoscope the picture changes, so change the pictures of our thoughts; and yet a thousand times faster, thoughts fly through the mind almost unperceived. Reader, dost thou at times arrest them in their flight and say, What are thou, whence comest thou, thou bird of passage?
