

Stranded In Arizona

In February, 1850, George Kober family left St. Louis, Missouri in a covered wagon, the destination, California. The trip ends one hundred fifty years later in Arizona in the year 2000. How did this happen? Stories of the California gold riches filter into Independence Missouri. George Kober does not want to wait for a wagon train to be organized. Traveling alone, they reach Arizona, but the wagon breaks down in the hot desert, They are rescued by a U.S. Cavalry patrol. Now traveling along the Gila River, they ford the river. When they drive up on the opposite bank, the water has receded and they are on a paved road in the year 2000. They are rescued by young Henry Cole who takes them to his house, located in a rural farming area. Is he able to help them? Do they have to stay in the present surroundings? Will they ever get to California? Henry has his hands full.
